

Top Secret

To: Agent P. E. Pincher
From: FBK Special Literature Section
Re: Exchange rates for Muggle and Hogwarts currencies

Many of our citizens have been traveling to a variety of foreign places, but one of the most curious is a place called Diagon Alley. No one seems to know how to figure out the exchange rates between people called Muggles and those who report themselves to be residents of a place called Hogwarts.

One of our FBK Agents stumbled on to Diagon Alley, and in the rare bookshop discovered a copy of Quidditch Through the Ages by Kennilworthy Whisp. The Agent discovered in the Foreword an obscure passage indicating that in 1985 Comic Relief UK (United Kingdom) raised 250 million dollars that is equivalent to 34 million Galleons. We think this clue is significant and wanted to pass this along to your best agents to crack this mystery.

The FBK Research Department thoroughly read all the Harry Potter books and discovered this additional data which may be helpful—29 Knuts = 1 Sickle, and 17 Sickles = 1 Galleon.

Good Luck,
Penn E. Pincher, FBK Agent

Copyright © National Council on Economic Education